Members of the Evaluation Committee:

By virtue of its geographic size, its population density, its population diversity, the presence of many of the world's major financial entities, and the sheer inventiveness and creativity of its residents, the City of Jersey City can provide Google a high probability of success in your "Fiber to Communities" initiative.

Jersey City has always been at the forefront of putting new technology to work - from the visionaries who built its municipal water system infrastructure, to Robert Fulton and his steamship "Claremont", from the massive H&M Powerhouse switched on via remote control by Theodore Roosevelt in Washington DC, to the financial powerhouses of Wall Street West that dominate our waterfront and the world's economy.

Jersey City residents appreciate the benefits of truly high speed internet access and are poised to utilize it to full advantage, for business, for education, for the arts, for all of us.

I urge you to give serious consideration to Jersey City's application to be a test city for the "Fiber to Communities" initiative. We're just what Google is searching for.

Sincerely,
